Description

Rectangular abstract collage with uneven edges. The base is tan cardstock, with the collage adhered roughly in the center. The collage is made up of magazine clippings, two of which have been painted with acrylic paints. The paint hues include: red, green, and black. The upper two-thirds of the proper right edge (including the upper corner) is one of these painted pieces, which were applied in an organic and abstract manner. The second piece of painted paper is in the center of the upper edge and is painted in the same fashion as the first (although the piece is much smaller). The proper left half of the collage is a magazine clipping, which is mainly shades of purple with a horizontal tan line along the halfway point. A piece of printed red paper is in the center of the upper half, while the proper right lower corner (extending to roughly the halfway point on the lower edge) is a section of magazine clipping with contains purple and tan.
