Description

Display case (a) and gray sheet metal top (b). (a)

Trapezoidal-shaped display case. Brass framework and structure with three rectangular glass windows: one large window on front and two smaller windows on sides. The side windows are hinged along the back side and open out; only top right opening slide mechanism is still intact. Top section is molded brass and recesses toward top. Interior of top has five glass light bulbs intact screwed into white ceramic electrical receptacles. Interior of display case on bottom is black stone with pink, gray, and white marbled lines, possibly marble(?). Interior back of display case is white painted wood(?). Base of display case is faced in etched brass with geometric design on three sides; the design are vertical patterns in an Art Deco style. Interior of display case ceiling is textured gray glass (looks like small bubbles). Bottom of base is recessed and has a rough finish. Gray metal padlock locked to d-ring on top right front corner; padlock is locked and key is missing. Back is flat metal. Electrical cord protrudes from back bottom center with two-pronged black plug at end. (b) Trapezoidal-shaped gray mottled sheet metal top. Flat. Six holes around perimeter. Sits atop Part a, but was likely attached with screws at some point as indicated by the perimeter holes.
